True leadership is not about what you do; It is about boldly developing who you are

The Boot Camp Mission
To rally, engage, and empower the women leaders of the Architecture, Engineering and Construction (AEC) industry to accept full responsibility for the generation of their own careers, futures, and lives.

Come discover the power of your own purpose.
This “Boot Camp” experience is your opportunity to explore and discover the unique challenges and opportunities facing our industry and the built environment today. Women possess the exact set of leadership skills and talents needed and called for to navigate the tides of change before us. Here is where you will leverage your collective experiences and challenges as leaders in the industry which are unique only to women.

Generating Your Own Life, Generating Your Own Future
This Boot Camp is a “Call-to-Action” for individual women in leadership roles in the AEC industries to fully own and embrace their own power—and to learn how to leverage that power in support of their own futures and the future of an industry going through a monumental transformation. For all to fully embrace and leverage their collective talents to influence and effect transformative change in an industry in need of creative destruction. Women leaders MUST take advantage of the opportunities before them and take full responsibility for the potential of their own contributions. The days of waiting to be asked, or waiting to be invited, or waiting our turns is over. The cost to our communities, companies and families in performance, productivity, and effectiveness is too great.
